The Peoples Party.

A third party was born at Cincinnati recently and started out on its political career under the name and style of "The Peoples Party of the United States of America." It is the offspring of a body of men calling themselves "The National Union Conference," and was made up of members of the Farmers' Alliance, the Citizens Alliance, the Peoples party, the Knights of Labor, the National Industrial Alliance, the Anti-Monopoly party, and the Single Tax party. These seven parties contracted into one constitute the third party. The Greenback party and the Prohibition party knocked also for admittance into the fold, but were practically excluded. The conference which originated the third party movement, though calling itself national, will hardly be so considered, and it is pleasant to note that the Southern members of the Farmers Alliance refuse to take stock in the so-called third party. The conference was dominated by Kansas men who furnished nearly one-fourth of the delegates recognized as entitled to seats in the body. There were but 25 delegates in the conference from the State of Texas, and most of the other Southern States were not represented in the body at all. Southern agriculturists cannot accept as leaders the rabid Republicans of Kansas, and without them it is not likely that the third party movement will amount to much.—Esterprize, Accomac C. H., Va.

Methodist Paper in Louisville.

The Kentucky Methodist is the name of the paper recently removed Lexington, Ky., to Louisville. It is an eight-page paper, with five broad columns, in good type, and with excellent print, and is published at the low price of $1 per year. Address the Kentucky Methodist, Louisville, Ky., for a sample copy. An agent is wanted for this county, to whom a liberal commission will be paid.

As almost every denomination except the Methodist have a strong paper in the State metropolis, it would seem that the Methodists would also want one. If so, they should give this paper a hearty support, as it is, or will be, the best they can ever hope to have. We will club it with THE HERALD at $1.75 for both papers.

Take Notice.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to G. B. Swango must make settlement at once. His accounts have been placed in my hands for collection, and when I call upon those owing him I shall expect them to settle. If they do not I will warrant them and they can not pay debt and costs. I will take any kind of stock, at good prices. Respectfully but earnestly yours.

LUKE MASON.

A Thrilling and Romantic Story of the Late Civil War.

BY JOHN R. MURKIN,
AUTHOR OF "DODGING AND DODGERS,"
"HARRY LAKEMAN," "WALTER BROWN,"
"FIELD," "BANKERS OF BEDFORD,"
AND OTHER STORIES.

[Copyrighted, 1891.]

Night set in black and cheerless. The shrill north wind whistled through the dead branches of the trees, and the shivering soldiers bent their heads toward the earth. At midnight it was snowing and soon a carpet of white was spread over the earth. The wretched men, shivering and crouching before the blast, scarce could move to shake off the flakes that were covering them like a mantle of white.

"Cap, don't ye hear some one comin'?" old Arkansaw Tom asked.

Luke listened, and could hear the faint tread of footsteps coming from the rear ground. He immediately dispatched his orderly to the Colonel, asking permission to capture the bold "intruder," who had evidently come out to reconnoiter.

Without consulting any higher authority, Colonel Smart told him to "go ahead."

"Tom, Max, Red, Bill," said the Captain, calling over the names of those whom he knew could be trusted. Silent as shadows they rose to their feet, glided to his side, and the five stole out upon the cleared space between them and the fort. It was now so dark that no object could be seen a dozen paces away. The shrill north wind seemed to pierce them to the bone.

Suddenly they stopped. Whispers were heard ahead. The snow was falling fast, and the scouts crept through it, not enough to discover half a dozen men, evidently Confederate officers, grouped together engaged in conversation.

Luke determined to cut them off and make captives of them, but, while moving in between them and the fort, the unlucky Max stumbled over a stone, and a loud noise as if an ox had dropped from the moon. Three of the rebels fired at them and took to their heels.

"Come quick, we've no time to lose, if we want to take them," whispered Captain Mason, running at full speed, hoping to cut them off.

Max and Snow blazed away, but missed. Cotton and Tom then fired their muskets, and a man fell. The frozen ground was rough and stumpy. Luke, seeing the foot, distanced his companions and was gaining on the hindmost man, who flew for life toward the fort.

Suddenly the pursued, without checking his speed, drew a revolver and emptied half a dozen chambers in almost as many seconds at Luke. Though the bullets flew un harmlessly near the young officer's head, he was unharmed, and with drawn sword did not halt for a moment. The fort was reached, and Luke, turning his head when he fired, and did not see the stump before him until he had stumbled and fallen over it.

Before he could rise Luke was upon him with uplifted sword.

"Surrender!" he cried, in a voice hoarse with passion. The answer came from the ground in a voice firm and decided.

"Never to a Yankee. Strike if you will."

At the sound of the voice Luke's arm felt powerless at his side, and he turned away. All his heart's tenderest feelings had been roused by the sound of that voice.

"They have escaped us," he said to his companions whom he met coming toward him. "Get back to your ranks, for we are too close now."

On their way back they picked up the man that had fallen, who proved to be a rebel Lieutenant. The ball had pierced his heart, killing him instantly.

Luke said nothing about his adventure with the Confederate who had emptied his revolver quietly but miserably passed. At daybreak the entire line of shivering, quaking, half-frozen soldiers were roused by their officers.

"Yes, by jingo, that they come, bag and baggage," said Arkansaw Tom, seizing his gun and starting to his feet.

Luke, who had been sitting at the root of a tree in a slight daze, was at a moment. A long line of grey coats could be seen coming over the enemy's works, forming and advancing upon the fort. The rebels had on their haversacks, canteens, blankets and knapsacks, as if they were going on a march.

"They're comin' ter stay," brought grub 'n' blankets," said old Tom.

The long roll sounded, calling every man to battle. In three minutes the whole line was formed. On with tremendous yells they came, and the work of death began.

First a few dropping shots, like the patter of a rain shower, and then came a storm of fire and leaden hail. It was kept up, fiercer and nearer the contending lines approached, and fiercer and denser grew the conflict. Luke glanced along their line, half concealed with smoke, from which the angry flames constantly flashed. The blast from those guns never at work, shook the air, but in fitful running flames continued to dance along the line.

Luke's men were falling on every side. The ground was strewn with dead and dying, and the awful work still went on. Cheer after cheer, yell upon yell, as if heads hurled were at work, shook the very air. The woods were filled with smoke, and trees thickly peppered with bullets.

"We're out of ammunition, cartridges give out," yelled Max.

Hundreds of others were in the same condition, and the men became so alarmed that a stampede was threatened.

Captain Mason knew that not twenty ounces under the hill there were tons of ammunition. He told his orderly to go out and bring it, but he stood like a statue.

Then he spoke to a sergeant, and while directing him what to do a bullet killed the poor fellow at his Captain's feet. Instantly Smith was already among the slain, and the Second Lieutenant wounded. The Captain did not dare leave his command, for they were ready to fly at a moment's notice, and ammunition could not be brought. At this moment the enemy charged with fixed bayonets, and McClelland's brigade fell back in disorder.

The fight began shortly after daylight, and it was now nearly noon.

The rebels had not driven the Union troops far before General Grant arrived with reinforcements, and the worn-out, shivering soldiers took courage and rushed about to once more make the enemy.

Luke, with about twenty of his company, all whom he had been able to hold together, turned in with the rest of the blue coats.

"We'll pay 'em back," roared old Arkansaw Tom, who had not moved from the light kept at the side of his Captain.

The order was given to charge bayonets, and the retreating Confederates fled before a line of gleaming steel. Snally and dog gently they had fought, giving up the ground inch by inch, and now seemed inclined to die in their tracks.

"WE'LL PAY THEM BACK!" ROARED ARKANSAW TOM.

A Confederate officer was standing surrounded by a heap of slain, making a desperate effort to rally his fleeing comrades. A hundred shots were fired at him, but he seemed to hold a charmed life.

"Dot blast 'im, 'tis 'not miss," roared Tom as with fixed bayonet he lunged at the brave officer's heart. The bayonet was not six inches from the young man's breast when a sword struck it up, and a hand was laid upon his shoulder. The old soldier staggered back from his Captain's side, and, catching a glimpse of the young Confederate's features, he recognized him as Albert Neff.

The fighting lasted pretty much all day, and when night came Luke's regiment was again the outer rifle pits of the enemy.

The regiment had suffered severely. Colonel Smart was killed, so was the Major, the Lieutenant Colonel, and a number of wounded, and almost every regimental officer was dead or fallen. More than half the regiment had fallen.

"We have not a regimental officer to command us," Luke reported to General McClelland.

At this time he began considering himself in command, "was the General's answer."

As the senior Captain left the command, of course, fell upon Luke by regular promotion. Luke, however, would be left light he left his company with him, and took command of the regiment.

Luke's regiment was participated on the morning, and Luke and his regimental officers lay on their arms on the battle-field.

What was their surprise on the morning to see the white line of fortifications covered with white flags. It was some time before the army could realize it, but the enemy had surrendered and Fort Donelson was theirs.

CHAPTER X.

AN UNEXPECTED MEETING.
Cheer upon cheer filled the air, and the long lines of blue coats could already be seen in the distance. The stars and stripes were waving.

"Is he killed, or shall I find him among the prisoners?" Luke asked himself, as he entered the works at the head of his regiment.

Long he searched among the living, then the dead, and finally went among the wounded Confederates.

"For whom are you searching?" General Grant asked, coming upon the young officer who had saved his life at Belmont, as he was making some inquiries of a wounded prisoner.

A very dark friend, General.

"How do you know he was in Donelson?" the silent man of iron asked.

"I recognized him in yesterday's charge."

"Is he a relative?"

"No, but an old schoolmate, the play-fellow of my childhood, the friend of my mother who I loved."

"He's your man's friend. His men would have died for him."

"Who was your Colonel?"

"Colonel Henry Morgan. His son Joseph Morgan is our Major, and only twenty. He was wounded in a scrimmage we had in Missouri last September. If it hadn't been for a friend of Captain Neff's we'd been killed or taken there."

"Was you one of the six with Captain Neff who was in the woods on the hill, after that fight in the peach orchard?"

"Yes, sir."

"I was the man who found you and led the cavalry from the woods."

"Why, give us your hand, Captain. We uns' he never forgot ye, and ye'd fare well if ye ever fall in his hands."

"Do you know this Morgan family?"

"Yes, know 'em like a book. I was Colonel Morgan's over-seer, and had been for twenty-two years. When he lived in Tennessee I was his over-seer, and four year ago, when he sold out to come to Missouri, I came with him, cause he ailers said I was the best man to manage his place."

Never had any trouble with but one of his negroes, who was a great big feller named Pete. He owned him in Tennessee twenty-three or four year ago. Pete was stubborn and I whipped him. He tried to kill me, but I didn't let him shoot at me with his own child, 'n' Pete run off. An' the strangest thing I yet to come, Captain, I'm hangin' if I didn't take nigger last fall, after I listed in the service."

"It was only a striking likeness."

"Well, that's what Colonel Morgan said, but I'd bet a hundred dollars it war that ar same Pete."

"The Morgans are very strong Southerners, are they not?"

"Reck'ar fire-eaters. From the old man down all war Confederate. T' tell ye the truth, Captain, I war kinder on 't fence nigh. He owned him in Tennessee twenty-three or four year ago. Pete was stubborn and I whipped him. He tried to kill me, but I didn't let him shoot at me with his own child, 'n' Pete run off. An' the strangest thing I yet to come, Captain, I'm hangin' if I didn't take nigger last fall, after I listed in the service."

"Colonel Morgan has a daughter?"

"Yes, Esau Morgan, an' 't pleasant little rebel ye ever seed."

"I met her once and saved her from ar- rowing just wherever I want to. But if Buckner 'd had command at just instead of Floyd an' Pillow ye wouldn't a hit here so."

"Where there any other ladies here from Missouri in the Sanitary Corps?"

"Yes, a hull passed."

"You know others than the Morgans?"

"No, except the Jennings women, the Ryans and O'Learys."

On leaving the hospital an orderly informed him that he was wanted at bright moonlight. On reaching General McClelland's tent he found him surrounded by his staff and so busily engaged that it would be some time before he could see him.

At last the General saw him and said: "Captain Mason, your regiment is in a bad condition, and will have to reorganize."

"I can't do that, with the men I can't be done now, and for the present you will be placed in command of it. Muster your men up, and I'll see to it that you get to me how many answer to roll call."

"Hev they made ye Kernal?" asked Arkansaw Tom, on learning that Luke had been placed in command of the regiment.

"No, I have charge of the regiment, but am only a Captain."

"Goddit 's work without 't pay. 'Tain't fair. 'Tain't fair," growled old Tom.

Luke had each company call its roll, and made out his reports, which he forwarded promptly to headquarters.

One evening he was again summoned to brigade headquarters. Generals Grant, Sherman, and McClelland were there awaiting him. He was informed that on the 21st of the present month (February, 1862) they designed moving on Clarksville, and several days later to Nashville, unless orders to the contrary were received.

"What we want, Captain Mason, is for you to make a reconnaissance along the roads leading to these two cities," said General McClelland. "The country is said to be overrun with bands of Confederates, and we want you with a sufficient force to start to-night and go out at least a dozen miles and report to us to-morrow, or just as early as you can. Will you do it?"

"I will try," he hesitatingly answered. "That's all any man could ask," said the conqueror of Donelson. "How many men do you want?"

"Fifty light horse will be amply sufficient."

"Take your pick from the army."

After selecting the cavalrymen suited to his service he chose in addition his four tried and trusty friends—Arkansaw Tom, Max, Snow and Cotton—and securing the best horses to be found, with a negro guide, started at once upon their perilous expedition.

The pickets were passed, and they were in a dark road surrounded by a forest. The dull splash, splash, splashing of horse feet in the muddy water was the only sound which broke the silence. The feet and legs of the soldiers were covered with a creamy ooze which penetrated to the skin and chilled them.

The night was too dark for any object to be seen, and as Luke rode at the side of the guide he held a cocked pistol in his right hand.

"It is woods all the way to Clarksville!"

"Yes, boss, 'bout all de way, I reckon," the negro answered. "Dar am some fields."

"Are the people about here loyal?"

"No, boss; dey's all secession."

"Then we can expect no favors from 'em."

"Dey'd cut our heads off 'f dey could."

"I heah hoes feet comin' down 't road, Cap'n," said old Arkansaw Tom, who was just behind Luke.

"How many do you think they are?" asked Luke, checking his horse.

"I'd bet 't was a hundred."

"Dey am no friends," said the guide.

Luke determined to give them a wide berth, and ordered the guide to take them to some safe spot at the roadside, where they halted and waited for the horsemen to go by. The heavy splashing of horses' feet could be heard by the Union cavalry.

From the front of the line it took the horsemen to pass Luke knew there must be at least twenty-five of them. His strange guide declared there were thirty. The guide's voice seemed strangely familiar to Luke. He had not seen his features, as he had never met him by daylight, or even by the light of a torch, or he would have recognized him. It was not until he said:

"Come on, now, Massa Luke!" that he recognized him.

"Blackhawk!" he gasped.

"Yes, Massa."

"Why are you here! Where have you been?"

"T'ryin' ter help save dis Union, Massa Luke, 'n' sot my chillun free. I knows every foot of 's country, kase I usester live heah; but dey's gone now, Massa, an' we kin go on."

They had not gone more than three miles when they came to a large, old-fashioned Southern planter's house, standing on the top of a commanding eminence. From the windows there flashed brilliant lights, and as the guide excitedly seemed to pervade the building from attic to cellar.

Lights from gilded chandeliers shining from the ceiling, and from the windows across a delightful lawn, and showed a number of horses hitched to the fence.

Mason halted his command and called upon the owner of the cavalry to his side, and asked Blackhawk who lived in the house.

"Colonel Lucas, sah," the guide answered.

"Is he a Confederate?"

"Yes, sah, he is. An' 't specks dey am no 'grittin' ready to go off ter Nashville."

Captain Lawrence at this moment came up to where Luke stood at the head of the command, and Captain Mason said:

"Captain Lawrence, I believe there are several officers at this house, and it's our duty to arrest them."

"I am with you," the Captain answered. "More than likely there are also women and children in the house, so caution your men not to injure them, if possible."

CONSTITUTIONAL COMMENTS.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, must have had a hand in framing our new constitution, judging from the burdens it imposes upon the poor people.

Under the new constitution(?) much of the poor man's property now exempt is subject to taxation. Look! like it is against the poor man and for the rich. That's what.

To whom could you sell your lands if the new constitution(?) were to pass? Corporations pay higher prices than individuals for real estate, and under that instrument corporations can buy.

Every vote for the new constitution(?) lowers the price of land in Eastern Kentucky and helps to dig the grave of development in our dearly beloved mountains. See that you vote against it.

A constitution(?) that dabbles in local affairs must certainly labor under an affection of legislation of the lungs, and the disease would destroy all our prospects of development. Vote it down.

THE HERALD never yet advised its people wrongfully, and now, in behalf of growing generations and the unborn babies, it implores the voters of this section not to saddle upon their posterity the new constitution(?)

Can we afford to sanction the new constitution(?), which prohibits us from selling our lands in the market where they will bring the most money? Not much, and we'll knock her "higher'n a kite" the first Monday in August.

Can we afford to support the new constitution(?), that compels us to raise over $100,000 a year in State revenue to make up for the exemption of bank taxes to that amount? You bet we can't, nor we won't. Let the banks whack-up for themselves.

Practically, the new constitution(?) says to the people, support the railroads now in existence, for certainly you shall not have any others, and if it should go into effect all our commodities would be "higher'n a cat's back." Throw a boot-jack at it and kill the cursed thing on election day.

The new constitution(?) subjects to taxation at least $90,000,000 of the people's property now exempt, including the farmers' plows and wagons and reapers, the poor woman's sewing machine, the preserves in the pantry, the handiwork of the housewife's manufacture, and the pigs and the poultry. Can we of the "pauper counties" already as poor as "church mice," afford to saddle upon ourselves this additional tax to relieve the aristocrat and help perpetuate plutocracy? Hardly, and we'll sit down on the scheme hard the first Monday in August, if bursts the bay window of our breeches.

Notice.

All who know themselves to be indebted to the G. W. B. M. for tuition in Hazel Green Academy will please call and arrange accounts before the 26th inst. W. H. COBB, Principal.

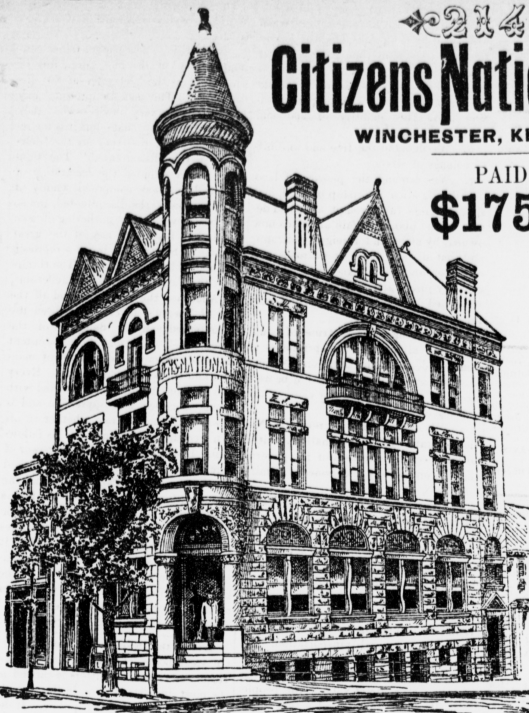

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.
Several months prior to and during the session of the last Legislature in this State, THE HERALD made an appeal for State aid to build turnpike roads through this section and succeeded in getting a bill introduced for that purpose. Our course was endorsed by all the thinking people of Eastern Kentucky, and, indeed, throughout the State, where others were not prejudiced against this portion of Kentucky. The bill referred to failed to find favor with the bluegrass bloods, notwithstanding that they originally had State aid for the very same purpose that we asked it, and thus the matter ended for the time. But all acknowledged that it would be a good investment for the State, as our counties could thereby soon be rendered revenue returning and after a few years—twenty at most—pay in as much revenue in proportion to population as any section in the State. In a word the idea was getting the popular favor and would sooner or later have become a law. Those who read our articles during the six months preceding the assembling of the Legislature will remember that we took the ground that inasmuch as other sections, and much wealthier ones, had in times past been assisted by the State in building turnpikes, it was only justice to our section that we be aided the same way. This course would have required on the part of the State the working of the convicts on our thoroughfares, which is certainly much better than leasing them to speculators in labor, and altogether more humane than to keep them confined in prison. So, looking at it from any standpoint, it would have been the best thing for the State and the State's interests. But, if the new constitution(?) should pass there is an end to all our fond hopes of State aid for turnpikes, and consequently a death blow to development, for that instrument contains a clause prohibiting the working of convicts outside the penitentiary walls. Not only this, but it also prohibits the State from hereafter taking stock or aiding in the construction of turnpikes. It is a fine thing for the favored sections to build up public highways with State aid and then say to their poorer neighbors, "This thing has got to stop. If you people of the mountains want pikes why build 'em, but at your own expense. True, the State did aid us when we needed help, but we have grown rich by reason of good roads, and lest you do as well we'll checkmate you with our new constitution(?)." Practically, this is the sentiment, though not maybe couched in the language as quoted, and that it is a "dog in the manger" principle every one must see. Now, can the people of the mountains of Eastern Kentucky afford to vote for an instrument that does them such great injury? Can or will they by their votes strike the death-blow to that development we so much desire? The answers to our queries will be given in August, on the first Monday in August, if you please, and they will be in emphatic terms. We appeal to every man who loves his country and who has the manhood to demand his just rights to cast his vote against the new constitution(?), and if he does not do it he can never expect his land to be worth to him, aside from an actual living, the taxes he pays upon it. Down with the instrument that destroys all prospects of prosperity in this portion of the State, and let every mountain mother's son do his duty on election day.

THE HAZEL GREEN FAIR.

One of the novelties at the Hazel Green Fair this year will be the walking, trotting and running race combined, in which each horse will be required to go a half-mile at each gate. Already several have signified their intention of entering horses for this race, and it promises to be unusually interesting. Another attractive feature will be the ring for the best lady rider under fifteen years of age, the premium being a special one of $10, donated by Mr. W. H. Gillis, representing Julius Louchheim & Co., Louisville, to which the Association adds $5 for the second best rider. It is confidently expected that this ring will bring out the greatest array of "beauty on horseback" that was ever seen in the old Commonwealth, and as mountain maidens are literally raised on horseback it will be a difficult ring to decide upon.

HON. JOHN YOUNG BROWN.

Hon. John Young Brown is in the field and his eloquence is brightening up things where he speaks like an electric light of a million-candle power. He spoke at Stanford, in Lincoln county, yesterday, and will today speak at Falmouth, in Pendleton county. See list of his other appointments, published elsewhere. We are making an effort to have Hazel Green added to his appointments.

Do You Need Money?

If so, you can get something better than dollars from us. The completion of the K. U. R. R. to Jackson has cut us off from a large wholesale trade heretofore had by us in several counties East, and left on our hands an immense stock of goods, which we are compelled to unload, and in order to do so we are determined to make prices do the work, prices which will render our patrons happy and make competition howl. We offer to Country Merchants Extra Inducements, and guarantee to them lower prices than they ever got before. We are overstocked and must unload. Remember we will duplicate any bill, with freights added, either wholesale or retail, East or West North or South, up hill or down.

We are now receiving such lines bought for CASH at bottom bargains as will fill every department. New, Fresh, Seasonable, Choice and Cheap. We can astonish you with lines of CHEAP TABLES covered with goods at half prices! (A new departure.) And more than this, we will have

Auction Regularly Every Saturday,

Commencing Saturday, May 30, 1891, at 9 a. m., at which every thing goes at reduced prices; come and bring your neighbors, one and all. Having secured a large boundary of Blue Grass for the year, we will exchange goods or pay cash for live stock. You can settle notes or accounts with the same. As the prices we name merely give us a chance to get our money out of the goods, we cannot afford to credit. Goods will be sold for cash only, or country produce, live stock and school claims taken in exchange. We shall open a new department under the charge of Miss Laura Rawlings and Miss Lula Day, which will be fully stocked with Fine Millinery, Notions, Ladies' Furnishing Goods, Wall Paper, Carpets and Oil Cloths, School Books and Supplies, Pictures and Frames, etc., etc.

Miss Rawlings is a thoroughly competent Milliner and Dress Maker, and we offer you a City Stock to select from. You can get as fine and stylish Millinery and Dresses here as anywhere, and at the very lowest prices. Yours, &c.,

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We are authorized to announce GEORGE W. DRAKE as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce WEIDEN (CONGLETON) as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party.

JAMES K. ROBERTS, of Lee County, is a candidate for the State Senate in this, the 34th, Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce JOHN F. HARGIS, of Jackson, as a candidate for State Senator in this, the 34th Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce JOHN P. WELLS, of Paintsville, Johnson County, as a candidate for Senator from this, the 34th Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce JOHN D. ATKINSON, of Powell County, as a candidate for State Senator from the 34th Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

A. J. RINGO, ex-Sheriff of Menefee County, and President of the Farmers and Laborers Union for the Tenth Congressional District of Kentucky, is a candidate for State Senator in the 34th Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

Mrs. Maggie Howard, of Jackson, is a guest of the Day House, and attending the Academy exercises.

The Misses Cockrell, of Ezel, are visiting Mrs. Belle Godsey of this place, and attending the closing exercises at the Academy.

G. B. Pieratt and sister, Miss Lizzie, of Ezel, are visiting their uncle, Judge G. B. Swango this week, and are close observers of the interesting exercises at the Academy.

Jas. L. Rowland and a Mr. Rice, of Salserville, were guests of the Day House Tuesday and Wednesday, and attended the closing exercises at Hazel Green Academy.

The proceedings of the Morgan county convention reached us too late for publication, but here is the result: A. J. Ringo, 2 45 votes; John D. Atkinson, 24 votes; John Hargis, 14 votes, and John P. Wells, 34-40 of a vote.

James A. Lacy, Wilmore Kendall, Ben Carr, Reb Kendall, John P. Salver and several other delegates from Morgan to the Campton convention were guests of the Day House Wednesday night, and left for Campton Thursday.

From the present outlook John D. Atkinson, Esq., of Stanton, is likely to be the Democratic nominee for State Senator from this district, and should this prove the case, the honor will be worthily bestowed. Today (Friday) will tell the tale.

Miss Abbie Tyler and a Miss Flannery, of Beattyville, are the guests of Dr. J. A. Taulbee. Miss Abbie was a pupil at the Academy a few years since, and she is this week attending the closing exercises and visiting among her many friends at this place.

J. T. Day & Co., request us to say that the auction at their store next Saturday morning will be the biggest and best they have ever had. It will also be the last one for a while, and all who wish to buy goods at greatly reduced prices should be sure to attend.

Rev. D. H. Fallon, writing us from War Creek, Breathitt county, June 29, says: "Dear Sir—Please announce in your next week's issue my appointment in the new church at Daysborough on next Saturday at 3 o'clock P. M. and on Sunday at 11 A. M. I organized a church at Cane Creek last Sunday. Thanking you for publication, I am yours fraternally," &c.

HAZEL GREEN ACADEMY.

Declamatory Contest, Entertainment and Commencement Exercises.

The present week has been a gala one at Hazel Green Academy, and the enjoyment of the entertainments given by the students of that institution under the supervision of Prof. and Mrs. Cord, renders the occasion one long to be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be able to attend.

On Monday night the declamatory contest by the juniors of the school for the handsome $25 gold medal, given by the Cecropian Society of Kentucky University came off, the following being the programme:

Invocation.....Rev. J. Z. HANEY.

First Revolution of the Heavens.....J. H. DEBUCKE.

Lafayette.....J. F. KASH.

March of Mind.....O. H. SWANGO.

Is Death the End?.....W. L. DAY.

The Voices of the Dead.....S. B. KASH.

The Drunkard's Death.....J. B. LITTLE.

Battle of Lookout Mountain.....J. F. MURPHY.

Touissant L'Ouverture.....J. S. DAY.

The Judges, Messrs. Charley Sublette, of Salserville, Quinsberry, of Winchester, Hon. D. S. Godsey, Esq., J. Z. Hanev and Judge Lusk, of this place, awarded the prize to Willie L. Day, of Hazel Green, the vote on the first ballot standing four for the victor and one for his brother, James S. Day, with a division of the audience between the two.

It is but justice, however, to say that all the contestants acquitted themselves with honor, both to themselves and the institution they attend.

Jimmie Swango, who by the way, was instrumental in having the medal donated, made the presentation speech, and the coveted prize was awarded in accordance with the decision of the judges.

The medal is a very handsome affair, made of 18K gold, and is inscribed as follows: "91. Declamatory contest, Hazel Green Academy," on the face, which is a round plate suspended by a chain from a scroll-bar, on which will be engraved the winner's name. The reverse side bears the following, "Presented by the Cecropian Society of the Kentucky University."

The hearty congratulations of THE HERALD go out to the winner, who is in part the protégé of this office, he having been taught to pick up type in this establishment. And in giving our greeting, we accompany it with the wish that the honors so gallantly won at Hazel Green Academy may inspire him to go higher and higher, until finally he shall have his name inscribed at the top of a scroll bearing the names of the "silver-tongued orators" and great statesmen of this great nation. May his watchword ever be, "onward and upward."

On Tuesday evening the entertainment proper, consisting of dialogues, recitations, music, tableaux, &c., came off, and several features of it are worthy of especial mention, but pursuing the course we have heretofore adhered to, we refrain from giving names lest we offend some one unintentionally.

On Wednesday evening the temperance drama, "The Social Glass," with a full cast of characters, was put upon the boards, and the acting of many of the parts was exceedingly well performed for amateurs. With no scenery or other stage effects to enhance the play, the audience was agreed that "The Social Glass" was a decided success, and many votaries of the bottle resolved then and there to taste not, touch not, handle not. So much for the portrayal of the part the drunkard plays in actual life, and may the social glass never be raised to the lips of any one who saw the play.

James H. Swango, of Wolfe county, will address the voters at the following times and places in the interest of the Democratic party:

Stanton, Powell county, Friday July 17.
Beattyville, Lee county, Saturday July 18.
Jackson, Breathitt co., Monday July 20.
Hindman, Knott co., Tuesday July 21.
Whiteburg, Letcher co., Wednesday July 22.

Ezel, Morgan co., Wednesday July 29.
Frenchburg, Menifee co., Thursday July 30.

Campton, Wolfe co., Friday July 31.
Hazel Green, Saturday August 1.

The ladies are especially invited to be present. Speaking promptly at 1 o'clock each day.

Who Straightened Up the Corn?

The question was asked
At our table today
Have you noticed that corn,
Which so prostrated lay?

One said it stands
As almost as erect as before
That terrible storm
In its fury did pour.

No one could imagine
How nature so soon,
Could restore to its beauty
The mischief then done;

But one said then by them,
The eldest one there,
For whom is placed
The easiest chair.

She knew what it did,
For she stole to the corn
While the others were busy
With work of the morn.

And with speed and with skill,
She raised every stalk
And quickly restored them
(Without line or chalk),
To their primitive places.

One after another,
And feeling some pride
That with all of their guessing
They would never guess another.

A Good Place to Deal.

We invite the especial attention of our readers to the large advertisement of Louis & Gus Straus, the leading clothiers of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. They are now reducing stock by cutting prices in two, which means a saving of one-half to the purchaser, and we advise all who want the best clothing at half price to avail of the present opportunity as such a chance may never again occur. This firm has advertised in THE HERALD for several years and built up a good trade. Among a host of their customers from this section are Prof. Cord, Judge G. B. Swango and sons Jimmie and Mort, H. L. Godsey, and a host of others, and all who deal with them will bear us out in the statement that they receive courteous treatment, the best goods and honest values. Call and see them when you go to Lexington.

An Important Correction.

Through a piece of gross carelessness the card of P. R. Phillips, in our Fair catalogue reads, "with J. M. Robinson & Co." and it should read "with Carter Bros. & Co." We hope all interested will note the correction, and make due allowance for a rush of work night and day for a month past.

The Place for Your Daughters.

Parents having daughters to educate should read the advertisement of the Winchester Female College, to be found on the first page of this issue of our paper. It is a first-class school delightfully located, and the terms will be made known on application to the president, S. W. Peary, Winchester, Ky., to whom write for a catalogue.

FREE SCHOLARSHIP.

Any scholars taking a first and second honors on the completion of their courses in the Academy, shall be entitled to a free scholarship each in Kentucky University. A free scholarship in the Academy will be awarded to one pupil from each of the following counties, viz: Breathitt, Clay, Elliott, Floyd, Harlan, Johnson, Knott, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Lawrence, Martin, Magoffin, Menefee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike, Powell and Rowan; provided, such arrangements have been made for the competitive examination by the common school authorities, or with their consent, as shall enable each student of common school grades to compete for the scholarship, and the applicant therefor shall bear a certificate from the examiner that he has obtained the highest mark attained upon the examination in his county.

BOARDING.

We are arranging to build a Dormitory that will accommodate 60 boarders, and will have it ready for occupancy by the opening of school. There will not be any more trouble about "too high board." The cost of board will be the lowest possible.

We will be prepared to do better work next session than ever before. During the summer the school will be supplied with maps, charts, globes, etc., etc.

You cannot find a better school in the mountains of Kentucky. Our rates are low; our methods of teaching Normal, we keep abreast with the tide of education. Our pupils are our best advertisement. We refer you to them.

Hazel Green is the prettiest town in Eastern Kentucky; free from many of its railroads, and those of more population; no saloons or barbers of temptation. The people welcome strangers, and influences for good are thrown around them. All boarders will be under the supervision of the teachers. Send for catalogues, etc.

MORGAN.

West Liberty Wives.

Some of the finest fish are being caught in the Licking by parties fishing with their hands. Some fish caught under rocks, etc., by hand have weighed over five pounds. One of our merchants, in company with the pastor of the Methodist church at this place, tried their luck in this way, and the largest thing caught was a water dog.

We are sorry that our town officers are so negligent of their duty. It is a shame for citizens to be disturbed by pistol shots on the streets at late hours of the night, and no one to bring these offenders to justice. Circuit court should ask the trustees to remember their obligations.

The primary held here last Saturday showed that Mr. Atkinson, of Powell county, was the strongest man in this precinct for the nomination for Senator from this district. He is worthy, as all admit. By the next issue of THE HERALD the man will be known.

The Morgan Messenger will start on its mission on the 27th inst. We predict for it a brilliant career, as the editors are men of push and ability.

Ezel Evolutions.

J. B. Cecil, a pushing farmer near this place, is tearing away his old building and putting up one of the finest farmers' dwellings in this neighborhood. He recently sold a six acre crop of last year's tobacco for $445, and has ten acres in tobacco this year. He is also doing much to improve the stock of this section, having the largest collection of fine brood mares of any man in this community. Plenty of such farmers would lessen the cry of oppression, especially in the mountains.

James H. Lackey, who went from here to Minnesota six years ago, is visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity. He is thoroughly impregnated with the third party influence and is talking of making us a speech on the subject. He was a delegate to the great convention at Cincinnati recently.

Emmerson Vest, who has been visiting at this place, left last week for his home at Soldier, Ky.

Rules For Correspondents.

Write only news items of general interest, and aim to have them fresh and reliable. Get all the news and condense it in as few words as possible. Give the fullest details in the case of a serious accident, murder or suicide.

Write the name of your post office and state.

Write your most important news items first.

Be careful to spell all proper names correctly, and write every letter in them plainly.

You may describe usually severe local storms, but in no other case should you speak of the weather.

In giving "personals" don't mention visits among neighbors or to persons in the same part of the county, unless they are tended by some accident or some other unusual event.

Don't puff anybody's business unless it is paid for as an advertisement. Where such puff please one reader they offend several others.

State facts only, not gossip or opinions, and state them in short sentences.

Be careful as possible to write nothing that would give offense to any one. Don't speak of your enemies at all unless you can speak kindly of them.

Number the pages of your manuscript; don't number the items; write only on one side of the paper and sign your name.

THE HERALD is only $1 a year - Subscribers only.

At the county convention held at this place yesterday, the entire vote cast for all the candidates was 184, and divided as follows: Atkinson, 111; Hargis, 38; Ringo, 33, and Wells, 1. C. C. Hanks, J. C. Lykins, John Rose and W. A. Byrd were elected delegates to attend the district convention.

The funerals of Mrs. T. K. Tutt and Mrs. Nancy Fulk will be preached at the M. E. church South at this place next Sunday at 11 o'clock A. M., by Revs. D. F. Duvall and S. P. Chandler. Every invited.

Dr. J. H. Stamper informs me that Lula, 15-year-old daughter of S. H. Rose, has been dangerously ill with fever and inflammatory rheumatism, but is some better.

The many friends of G. W. Cox will be glad to hear that he is some better, and may get well.

A. F. Byrd and G. T. Center are attending Common Pleas at Stanton this week.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 19, 1891.

Mr. Harrison has recognized the labor organizations by appointing Mr. H. J. Schulteis, of the District of Columbia, who is prominently connected with the federation of labor, an additional member of the immigration commission provided for by the last Congress, the duties of which will be to proceed to Europe for the purpose of investigating immigration. The appointment of Mr. Schulteis may also be considered as a semi-official recognition of the Peoples party recently formed at Cincinnati, as he was by that convention named as one of the District of Columbia representatives on the national committee of the new party.

Ex-Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohio, who was originally appointed chairman of the immigration commission and whose ill-advised criticisms of foreign born American citizens raised such a row a few weeks ago, wired his resignation to Secretary Foster and it was promptly accepted. It was such a relief to Secretary Foster and Mr. Harrison to receive Gen. Grosvenor's resignation that they rewarded him for sending it in by making him a special World's Fair commissioner, a position that pays precisely the same and which also includes an allowance for a trip to Europe. There are people malicious enough to say that Grosvenor would not have resigned if he had not been promised the other place beforehand.

Office seekers are always an unmitigated nuisance to those whom they suppose to be possessed of influence with the appointing powers, and a striking instance of how they made life a torture for the friends of an estimable old gentleman whose goodness of heart prevented his snubbing the whole tribe as they deserved to be instead of worrying himself sick in trying to get them appointments or promotions as the case might be, has just come to light here. The persecuted old gentleman in this case is no less a personage than President Harrison's father-in-law, Rev. Dr. Scott, who has been for months an honored inmate of the White House, but who has now gone on an indefinite visit to his son who resides away out on the Pacific coast. Dr. Scott is now in his eighty-third year, and it seems a shame that he should have to be sent across the continent to get away from the persistent office seekers, but there is little that such is the fact. He did not resent this persecution; on the contrary he seemed to like it, and his only worry was that the heads of departments would not make the appointments or promotions which he was constantly asking for and even insisting upon. It was only recently that President and Mrs. Harrison became aware of the number and persistence of Dr. Scott's calls upon the heads of the departments in behalf of some one who had convinced him by some plausible story that they were deserving of receiving an appointment, or if already in the service a promotion, and it was extremely mortifying to them both. Persuasion failing to stop him he was sent on this visit.

Verily the way of the political organ is a hard one. The backers of the National Democrat have become tired of throwing good money down a "rat" hole, and unless a purchaser for the paper can be found it will probably soon suspend.

There are lots of rumors, some of them highly sensational, as to why Secretary Foster did not attend the Ohio convention, after having announced his intention to do so, and what makes it look still queerer is that he did go to Ohio yesterday, the day after the convention had adjourned. Important public business interest is given out as the cause of his not getting away in time to attend the convention, but some who nobody believes that to have been the real cause.

Secretary Noble, who has returned to his duties, says he has no intention of retiring from the cabinet. He certainly ought to know.

It is now stated with much positiveness that Gen. Baum is to continue at the head of the pension office.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison left yesterday with their grandchildren for their seaside cottage. Mr. Harrison will spend as much time with them as possible during the next two months.
